

SUNNY
HIGH 84, LOW 62—PAGE D8

The Washington Times

THURSDAY, JUNE 29, 1989

WASHINGTON, D.C.

PHONE: (202) 636-3000
SUBSCRIBER SERVICE: (202) 636-3333 25 cents

Homosexual prostitution inquiry ensnares VIPs with Reagan, Bush

By Paul M. Rodriguez
and George Archibald
© 1989 THE WASHINGTON TIMES

'Call boys' took midnight tour of White House

A homosexual prostitution ring is under investigation by federal and District authorities and includes among its clients key officials of the Reagan and Bush administrations, military officers, congressional aides and U.S. and foreign businessmen with close social ties to Washington's political elite, documents obtained by The Washington Times reveal.

One of the ring's high-profile clients was so well-connected, in fact, that he could arrange a middle-of-the-night tour of the White House for his friends on Sunday, July 3, of last year. Among the six persons on the extraordinary 1 a.m. tour were two male prostitutes.

Federal authorities, including the Secret Service, are investigating criminal aspects of the ring and have told male prostitutes and their homosexual clients that a grand jury will deliberate over the evidence throughout the summer, The Times learned.

Reporters for this newspaper examined hundreds of credit-card vouchers, drawn on both corporate and personal cards and made payable to the escort service operated by the homosexual ring. Many of the vouchers were run through a so-called "sub-merchant" account of the Chambers Funeral Home by a son of the owner, without the company's knowledge.

Among the client names contained in the vouchers — and identified by prostitutes and escort operators — are government officials, locally based U.S. military officers, businessmen, lawyers, bankers, congressional aides and other professionals.

Editors of The Times said the newspaper would print only the names of those found to be in sensitive government posts or positions of influence. "There is no intention of publishing names or facts about the operation merely for titillation," said Wesley Pruden, managing editor of The Times.

The office of U.S. Attorney Jay B. Stephens, former deputy White House counsel to President Reagan, is coordinating federal aspects of the inquiry but refused to discuss the investigation or grand jury action.

Several former White House colleagues of Mr. Stephens are listed among clients of the homosexual prostitution ring, according to the credit-card records, and those persons have confirmed that the charges were theirs.

Mr. Stephens' office, after first saying it would cooperate with The Times' inquiry, withdrew the offer late yesterday and also declined to say whether Mr. Stephens would recuse himself from the case because of possible conflict of interest.

At least one highly placed Bush administration official and a wealthy businessman who procured homosexual prostitutes from the escort services operated by the ring are cooperating with the investigation, several sources said.

Among clients who charged homosexual prostitute services on major credit cards over the past 18 months are Charles K. Dutcher, former associate director of presidential personnel in the Reagan administration, and Paul R. Balach, Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole's political personnel liaison to the White House.

In the 1970s, Mr. Dutcher was a congressional aide to former Rep. Robert Bauman, Maryland Republican, who resigned from the House after he admitted having engaged in sexual liaisons with teen-age male

see PROBE, page A7

PROBE

From page A1

prostitutes. Mr. Dutcher also worked on the staff of Vice President Dan Quayle when he represented an Indiana district in the House.

A charge also was discovered against the credit card of a former White House staffer who prepared the president's daily news summary in the Reagan administration. Todd A. Blodgett said he had not made the charge.

One of the ring's big-spending clients is Craig J. Spence, Washington socialite and international trade consultant, according to documents and interviews with operators and prostitutes who say they engaged in sexual activities with Mr. Spence.

Mr. Spence spent upwards of $20,000 a month for male prostitutes who provided sex to him and his friends, said to include military personnel who also acted as his "bodyguards." It was Mr. Spence who arranged the nocturnal tour of the Reagan White House. Repeated attempts to reach Mr. Spence, by telephone, fax machine and personal visits to his home, were unsuccessful.

Credit-card vouchers confirm that Mr. Spence charged thousands of dollars on American Express and Visa cards, sometimes making $600 charges against his cards several times a day, drawn in behalf of an escort service called Professional Services Inc.

Professional Services is one of several umbrella companies used by operators supplying male prostitutes as escorts, as advertised in Washington tabloid newspapers and the telephone Yellow Pages.

Members of major news organizations also procured escort services from the ring, credit-card documents show. These include Stanley Mark Tapscott, who was an assistant managing editor of The Washington Times.

Mr. Tapscott, whose resignation on June 20 was accepted, said he had not procured homosexual escorts or sexual services of any kind. He said in an interview that he had talked to two women he arranged to meet through the escort service as part of an investigation of dial-a-porn services he had initiated a year earlier when he was editor of the newspaper's Money section. The charges were made against his company American Express card. His editors knew of no such investigation.

Before joining The Times, Mr. Tapscott worked for the Office of Personnel Management in the Reagan administration.

Managers of the escort ring said that "a few women" were used for clients who called with specific requests, but that the regular stable was altogether male.

The documents show that a number of clients — lawyers, doctors and business executives — used corporate credit cards to procure escort services and that a number of military officers from the United States and allied countries — including one foreign officer using a "Department of Defence" credit card — charged male escort services.

One former top-level Pentagon officer said that for the past eight years, military and civilian intelligence authorities have been concerned that "a nest of homosexuals" at top levels of the Reagan administration may have been penetrated by Soviet-backed espionage agents posing as male prostitutes, said one former top-level Pentagon official.

A major concern, said the former official with longtime ties to top-ranking military intelligence officers, was that hostile foreign intelligence services were using young male prostitutes to compromise top administration homosexuals, thus making them subject to blackmail.

"We have known for many, many years that there is a department of the KGB [Soviet intelligence] whose job it is to prey on sexual deviants," said retired Lt. Gen. Daniel Graham, former head of the Defense Intelligence Agency.

These are three of hundreds of credit card slips, obtained by The Washington Times, made out to Professional Services Inc. Names and card numbers of the customers have been deleted here, although they are on the originals.

Because "closet" homosexuals in government service can easily be "turned" through blackmail for espionage purposes, Gen. Graham said, "we have always in intelligence tried very hard not to be giving classified information to known homosexuals."

Those interviewed by The Times confirmed there were blackmail attempts by male prostitutes who wanted money and other favors to protect clients' secret sexual lives.

The clients interviewed say a Feb. 28 police raid on a house at 6004 34th Place NW was set off by reports of blackmail and possible credit-card fraud and complaints by District hotel operators about prostitution activities.

In the raid, spearheaded by the Washington Field Office of the U.S. Secret Service, authorities found a telephone switchboard operation serving a half-dozen homosexual escort services.

Secret Service agents and District police vice investigators confiscated financial records, as well as ledgers, photos, diaries, telephone records, Rolodexes and client lists of the prostitution network, during the raid and with subsequent subpoenas issued by D.C. Superior Court.

Although the confiscated material was turned over to District police on the scene, witnesses and law enforcement agents say the Secret Service kept one box of files containing names and other information about high-level government officials who were clients of the male escort business.

District police officials say that, to their knowledge, this is the first time the Secret Service has ever become involved in such a raid in this area.

Initially, the Secret Service denied it was involved in the raid, but after a second raid of the 34th Place house on May 18, the agency acknowledged its involvement in the investigation.

Secret Service spokesman Bob Snow said the agency participated in the search and seizure operation because of its jurisdiction over credit-card fraud. "We come into such operations usually at the request of a U.S. attorney... if the fraud involves $10,000 or more... We are not involved in any local prostitution investigation," Mr. Snow said.

Witnesses to the February raid said 12 Secret Service agents in blue parkas entered the house and spent several hours collecting and removing boxes of files.

Federal and District investigators have since interrogated several prostitutes working for the ring, as well as clients of the homosexual escort services operating under such names as Jovan, Man-to-Man, Metrodate, Ultimate Models and Ultimate First Class.

Editors of The Times said the newspaper would print only the names of those found to be in sensitive government posts or positions of influence. "There is no intention of publishing names or facts about the operation merely for titillation," said Wesley Pruden, managing editor of The Times.

In addition to credit-card fraud, the investigation is said to be focused on illegal interstate prostitution, abduction and use of minors for sexual perversion, extortion, larceny and related illicit drug trafficking and use by prostitutes and their clients.

One of the chief operators of Professional Services Inc. and a regular client of the service speculated in separate interviews that the investigation would be restricted because "big names" were involved.

"Henry Vinson [the operator] said a high-level official is going to try to block the investigation and may succeed," said Mr. Balach, the labor secretary's liaison to the White House. Mr. Vinson said he believes a highly placed federal official, whom he would not name, is working to derail the investigation, but he would not elaborate.

Authorities have been investigating possible credit-card fraud by the ring operators since last fall.

As early as last October — months before the police raid at 34th Place — Mr. Balach was interviewed by investigators about grand larceny he said was committed against him by a male escort named Jason Michael Manos.

In an interview, Mr. Balach said he met and befriended Mr. Manos last summer following a paid "date" set up by "Man-to-Man," one of the escort groups advertised by operators of Professional Services. Interviews with friends of Mr. Balach confirmed his relationship with Mr. Manos.

According to Mr. Balach, who first procured homosexual prostitutes from the network in June 1988, several clients, including himself,

The documents show that a number of clients — lawyers, doctors and business executives — used corporate credit cards to procure escort services and that a number of military officers from the United States and allied countries charged male escort services.

One former top-level Pentagon officer said that for the past eight years, military and civilian intelligence authorities have been concerned that "a nest of homosexuals" at top levels of the Reagan administration may have been penetrated by Soviet-backed espionage agents posing as male prostitutes, said one former top-level Pentagon official.

were blackmailed by the prostitutes.

Operators of the ring told The Times that videotapes, audiotapes and still photographs were made of sex acts performed by clients and the call boys, including perverted acts.

Documents show that customers were charged for "videotapes" from the operation.

In an attempt to hide the nature of credit-card charges for some clients, Professional Services billed them for innocuous items such as a "cremation urn" or "prayer cards." One of the ring's "credit-card processing" companies was established by Robert A. Chambers, a funeral director whose family owns Chambers Funeral Home.

Mr. Chambers, who declined to be interviewed, was said to have arranged with the Sovran Bank in Silver Spring to establish the sub-merchant account in the Chambers Funeral Home credit accounts in the name Professional Services Inc. It is through this sub-merchant account that credit-card vouchers and checks were processed from the male escort services.

Following the Feb. 28 police raid on the 34th Place residence, Chambers' funeral home officials, at the request of W.W. Chambers, the patriarch of the family business, canceled the unauthorized Professional Services account, according to the company's comptroller. Robert Chambers was fired by his father from the company at the time, a company official said.

Mr. Vinson, Professional Services' call-boy "dispatcher," is a trained mortician who also once worked for the clerk of the U.S. House of Representatives.

Mr. Balach, who at one time had given his power of attorney to Mr. Manos, with whom he had a "love relationship," said he had been bilked out of more than $40,000 through fraudulent use of his credit cards, forged signatures on checks and insurance policies.

Mr. Balach is still involved in civil litigation with a local bank over payment of thousands of dollars of MasterCard charges by Mr. Manos in Mr. Balach's name.

Mr. Balach said in an interview that Mr. Manos tricked him into taking a trip last fall to Greece in pursuit of employment with a Greek shipping tycoon for whom Mr. Manos had provided homosexual services.

When Mr. Balach returned from Athens, he found that Mr. Manos had taken $4,000 from his bank checking accounts — "my bank accounts were in the negative" — cashed savings bonds and opened up about a dozen charge accounts in his name at major department stores along the East Coast.

Also, Mr. Manos stole and demolished his car while Mr. Balach was on the trip to Greece, he said.

"This was a nightmare in my life," Mr. Balach said, explaining that his involvement with Mr. Manos was brought about by "loneliness, laziness."

Mr. Balach said his financial losses occurred after Mr. Manos threatened to expose to his government superiors his homosexual involvement with the prostitution ring. Mr. Balach said he informed his superior at OPM, Edward Guss, of the blackmail attempts and other problems involving Mr. Manos.

The Times has been unable to locate Mr. Manos, who reportedly has returned to the District in recent weeks.

Mr. Dutcher, who now heads a private consulting firm called The Dutcher Co., was charged with placing Reagan-oriented conservatives into the career Civil Service during the closing years of Mr. Reagan's presidency.

He describes himself as "bisexual" and said "stress" drove him to seek out a male prostitute. "I only used the service once. I only saw the person once. This person was there no longer than 35 minutes," Mr. Dutcher said.

He confirmed paying $155, which was charged to his Visa card. The sexual encounter was brief and the sex "was safe — extremely... I've had friends who died of AIDS," said Mr. Dutcher.

Mr. Dutcher said he never used his White House personnel position to place anyone in a government position whom he knew to be homosexual. "My priority was my job, not my private life," he said.

According to a credit voucher, Todd Blodgett's account was charged $325 on May 19, 1988, for male escort service "referral" by Professional Services.

Mr. Blodgett, a Republican National Committee staffer assigned to conduct "opposition research" against Democratic candidates nationwide, said in a series of interviews that a friend who is homosexual used his card to procure a male escort.

Mr. Blodgett brought the friend, Boston antiques dealer Benedict J. Hastings, to an interview Tuesday to substantiate his claim that he had done nothing illicit. "I am innocent," Mr. Blodgett said.

Mr. Hastings said Mr. Blodgett allowed him to use his American Express card and apartment on numerous occasions, and that he in turn allowed Mr. Blodgett to use his credit card on occasion.

Mr. Hastings said he used Mr. Blodgett's credit card to procure a male escort unbeknownst to the Republican staffer.

Mr. Hastings said the person was hired as a bartender at a quickly arranged party in Mr. Blodgett's District apartment. "I needed... someone who would wear just a black bow tie and [under]shorts," he said.

Mr. Blodgett said Mr. Hastings reimbursed him in cash for this and other charges when he returned to town. He said he did not know the details of those transactions until this week and that he "trusted" his friend of six years.

• Jerry Seper contributed to this report.

Washington Times on Franklin Case

Washington Times on Franklin Affair

"A homosexual prostitution ring is under investigation by federal and District authorities and includes among its clients key officials of the Reagan and Bush administrations, military officers, congressional aides and US and foreign businessmen with close social ties to Washington's political elite. Reporters for this newspaper examined hundreds of credit-card vouchers, drawn on both corporate and personal cards and made payable to the escort service operated by the homosexual ring."

-- Washington Times article on the Franklin Affair, 6/29/1989 (full text below)

- Scanned image of full front page Washington Times article available here
-

For a Discovery Channel Documentary revealing lots more on the Franklin case, click here

For how sex is used in high-level blackmail and manipulation, click here

For other reliable resources along these lines: Mind Control Information Center

---

Homosexual prostitution inquiry ensnares VIPs with Reagan, Bush 'Call boys' took midnight tour of White House

Paul M. Rodriguez and George Archibald
The Washington Times
June 29, 1989

A homosexual prostitution ring is under investigation by federal and District authorities and includes among its clients key officials of the Reagan and Bush administrations, military officers, congressional aides and US and foreign businessmen with close social ties to Washington's political elite, documents obtained by The Washington Times reveal.

One of the ring's high-profile clients was so well-connected, in fact, that he could arrange a middle-of-the-night tour of the White House for his friends on Sunday, July 3, of last year. Among the six persons on the extraordinary 1 a.m. tour were two male prostitutes.

Federal authorities, including the Secret Service, are investigating criminal aspects of the ring and have told male prostitutes and their homosexual clients that a grand jury will deliberate over the evidence throughout the summer, The Times learned.

Reporters for this newspaper examined hundreds of credit-card vouchers, drawn on both corporate and personal cards and made payable to the escort service operated by the homosexual ring. Many of the vouchers were run through a so-called "sub-merchant" account of the Chambers Funeral Home by a son of the owner, without the company's knowledge.

Among the client names contained in the vouchers - and identified by prostitutes and escort operators - are government officials, locally based US military officers, businessmen, lawyers, bankers, congressional aides and other professionals.

Editors of The Times said the newspaper would print only the names of those found to be in sensitive government posts or positions of influence. "There is no intention of publishing names or facts about the operation merely for titillation," said Wesley Pruden, managing editor of The Times.

The office of US Attorney General Jay B. Stephens, former deputy White House counsel to President Reagan, is coordinating federal aspects of the inquiry but refused to discuss the investigation or grand jury actions.

Several former White House colleagues of Mr. Stephen are listed among clients of the homosexual prostitution ring, according to the credit card records, and those persons have confirmed that the charges were theirs.

Mr. Stephen's office, after first saying it would cooperate with The Times' inquiry, withdrew the offer late yesterday and also declined to say whether Mr. Stephens would recuse himself from the case because of possible conflict of interest.

At least one highly placed Bush administration official and a wealthy businessman who procured homosexual prostitutes from the escort services operated by the ring are cooperating with the investigation, several sources said.

Among clients who charged homosexual prostitutes services on major credit cards over the past 18 months are Charles K. Dutcher, former associate director of presidential personnel in the Reagan administration, and Paul R. Balach, Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole's political personnel liaison to the White House.

In the 1970s, Mr. Dutcher was a congressional aide to former Rep. Robert Bauman, Maryland Republican, who resigned from the House after admitted having engaged in sexual liaisons with teen-age male prostitutes. Mr. Dutcher also worked on the staff of Vice President Dan Quayle when he represented an Indiana district in the House.

A charge also was discovered against the credit card of a former White House staffer who prepared the president's daily news summary in the Reagan administration. Todd A Blodgett said he had not made the charge.

One of the ring's big spending clients is Craig J. Spence, Washington socialite and international trade consultant, according to documents and interviews with operators and prostitutes who say they engaged in sexual activities with Mr. Spence.

Mr. Spence spent upwards of $20,000 a month for male prostitutes who provided sex to him and his friends, said to include military personnel who also acted as his "bodyguards." It was Mr. Spence who arranged the nocturnal tour of the Reagan White House. Repeated attempts to reach Mr. Spence by telephone, fax machine and personal visits to his home, were unsuccessful.

Credit card vouchers confirm that Mr. Spence charged thousands of dollars on American Express and Visa cards, sometimes making $600 charges against his cards several times a day, drawn in behalf of an escort service called Professional Services Inc.

Members of major news organizations also procured escort services from the ring, credit card documents show. These include Stanley Mark Tapscott, who was an assistant managing editor of The Washington Times.

Mr. Tapscott, whose resignation on June 20 was accepted, said he had not procured homosexual escorts or sexual services of any kind. He said in an interview that he had talked to two women he arranged to meet through the escort service as part of an investigation of a dial-a-porn services he had initiated a year earlier when he was editor of the newspaper's Money section. The charges were made against his company American Express card. His editors knew of no such investigation.

Before joining The Times, Mr. Tapscott worked for the Office of Personnel Management in the Reagan administration.

Managers of the escort ring said that "a few women" were used for clients who called with specific requests but that the regular stable was altogether male.

The documents show that a number of clients — lawyers, doctors and business executives — used corporate credit cards to procure escort services and that a number of military officers from the United States and allied countries — including one foreign officer using a "Department of Defence" credit card — charged male escort services.

One former top-level Pentagon officer said that for the past eight years, military and civilian intelligence authorities have been concerned that "a nest of homosexuals" at top levels of the Reagan administration may have been penetrated by Soviet-backed espionage agents posing as male prostitutes, said one former top-level Pentagon official.

A major concern, said the former official with longtime ties to top-ranking military intelligence officers, was that hostile foreign intelligence services were using young male prostitutes to compromise top administration homosexuals, thus making them subject to blackmail.

"We have known for many, many years that there is a department of the KGB [Soviet intelligence] whose job it is to prey on sexual deviants," said retired Lt. Gen. Daniel Graham, former head of the Defense Intelligence Agency.

Because "closet" homosexuals in government service can be easily "turned" through blackmail for espionage purposes, Gen. Graham said, "we have always in intelligence tried very hard not to be giving classified information to known homosexuals."

Those interviewed by The Times confirmed that there were blackmail attempts by male prostitutes who wanted money and other favors to protect clients' sexual lives.

The clients interviewed say a Feb. 28 police raid on a house at 6004 34th Place NW was set off by reports of blackmail and possible credit-card fraud complaints and by District hotel operators about prostitution activities.

In the raid, spearheaded by the Washington Field Office of the U.S. Secret Service, authorities found a telephone switchboard operation serving a half-dozen homosexual escort services.

Secret Service agents and District police vice investigators confiscated financial records, as well as ledgers, photos, diaries, telephone records, Rolodexes and client lists of the prostitution network, during the raid and with subsequent subpoenas issued by D.C. Superior Court.

Although the confiscated material was turned over to District police on the scene, witnesses and law enforcement agents say the Secret Service kept one box containing names and other information about high-level government officials who were clients of the male escort business.

District police officials say that, to their knowledge, this is the first time the Secret Service has ever become involved in such a raid in this area.

Initially, the Secret Service denied it was involved in the raid, but after a second raid of the 34th Place house on May 18, the agency acknowledged its involvement in the investigation.

Secret Service spokesman Bob Snow said the agency participated in the search and seizure operation because of its jurisdiction over credit card fraud. "We come into such operations usually at the request of a U.S. attorney ... if the fraud involves $10,000 or more ... We are not involved in any local prostitution investigation," said Mr. Snow.

Witnesses to the February raid said 12 Secret Service agents in blue parkas entered the house and spent several hours collecting and removing boxes of files.

Federal and District investigators have since interrogated several prostitutes working for the ring, as well as clients of homosexual escort services operating under such names as Jovan,

Man-to-Man, Metrodate, Ultimate Models and Ultimate First Class.

In addition to credit-card fraud, the investigation is said to be focused on illegal interstate prostitution, abduction and use of minors for sexual perversion, extortion, larceny and related illicit drug trafficking and use by prostitutes and their clients.

One of the chief operators of Professional Services Inc. and a regular client of the service speculated in separate interviews that the investigation would be restricted because "big names" were involved.

"Henry Vinson [the operator] said a high level official is going to try to block the investigation and may succeed," said Mr. Balach, the labor secretary's liaison to the White House. Mr. Vinson said he believes a highly placed federal official, whom he would not name, is working to derail the investigation, but he would not elaborate.

Authorities have been investigating possible credit card fraud by the ring operators since last fall.

[...]

Operators of the ring told The Times that videotapes, audio tapes and still photographs were made of sex acts performed by clients and the call boys, including perverted acts.

Documents show that customers were charged for "videotapes" from the operation.

[...]

---

For a Discovery Channel Documentary revealing lots more on the Franklin case, click here

For how sex is used in high-level blackmail and manipulation, click here

What you can do:

- Explore our comprehensive Mind Control Information Center at this link.
- For an excellent, verifiable two-page summary of secret mind control projects, click here.
- For highly revealing excerpts of key declassified mind control documents, click here.
- Read concise summaries of key major media articles on mind control available here.
- Inform your media and political representatives of this important information on mind control. To contact those close to you, click here. Urge them to bring greater public awareness to the topic of mind control and testing on unsuspecting citizens.
- Spread this news to your friends and colleagues. Share this article on key news websites using the "Share This" icon on this page, so that we can fill the role at which the major media is sadly failing. Together, we can make a difference.
- We need your support. Please help our work to grow and thrive by donating at this link.

See our archive of revealing news articles at www.WantToKnow.info/indexnewsarticles

Your tax-deductible donations, however large or small, help greatly to support this important work.

To make a donation by credit card, check, or money order:

<http://www.WantToKnow.info/donationswtk>

Explore the mind and heart expanding websites managed by the nonprofit PEERS network:

www.peerservice.org - PEERS websites: Spreading inspiration, education, & empowerment

www.momentoflove.org - Every person in the world has a heart

www.personalgrowthcourses.net - Dynamic online courses powerfully expand your horizons

www.WantToKnow.info - Reliable, verifiable information on major cover-ups

www.weboflove.org - Strengthening the Web of Love that interconnects us all

To reply to this message, visit <http://www.WantToKnow.info/contactus.php>

To subscribe to or unsubscribe from the WantToKnow.info list (one email every few days):

<http://www.WantToKnow.info/subscribe>

FAIR USE NOTICE: This site contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available in our efforts to advance understanding of criminal justice, political, human rights, economic, democracy, scientific, and social justice issues, etc. We believe this constitutes a 'fair use' of any such copyrighted material as provided for in section 107 of the US Copyright Law. In accordance with Title 17 U.S.C. Section 107, the material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving the included information for research and educational purposes. For more information go to:

<http://www.law.cornell.edu/uscode/17/107.shtml>. If you wish to use copyrighted material from this site for purposes of your own that go beyond 'fair use', you must obtain permission from the copyright owner.

---

WantToKnow.info is a PEERS empowerment website

---

Associate Press (AP) News

[URL: <https://apnews.com/article/0dab89d8675661ab75cd8d5dcc204d47>]

Political Figures Linked to Male Prostitution Ring

RICHARD KEIL June 29, 1989

WASHINGTON (AP) _ An aide to Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole resigned Thursday in the midst of a fraud investigation centering on an alleged homosexual prostitution ring.

U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens confirmed the investigation into alleged credit card duplicate billings after The Washington Times reported that the ring was patronized by Reagan and Bush administration officials, congressional aides and one of its own former editors.

One of a handful of individuals named in the Times article, Paul R. Balach, resigned Thursday evening.

"I hereby resign my position this date due to the public disclosure of activities concerning my personal life," Balach said in a letter announcing his resignation as Mrs. Dole's political personnel liaison to the White House.

Balach, who said he was a victim of the overbillings, said he quit to spare the department any disruption.

Secret Service agents and District of Columbia police raided a house in a posh section of the city on two occasions, in February and May. Affidavits used to obtain the search warrants said escort services using names such as "Dream Boys" and "Man to Man" were using the house.

In applying for the search warrant, District police Det. Gerald W. Robertson said the investigation had produced "probable cause to believe that records and evidence related to an interstate prostitution business" were located there.

Stephens refused to talk about allegations of the homosexual ring, but said in a statement that his office "has been investigating allegations involving credit card fraud arising from the execution of those warrants."

During the raids, officers confiscated multi-line telephones, paging devices, credit card imprinters, numerous bank statements, credit card slips and a diary of the escort business, according to an inventory filed in U.S. District Court.

The Washington Times said it has obtained a number of credit card slips and it identified individuals who paid for services including Balach.

Labor Department sources said Balach had decided Thursday morning to take a few days annual leave after being named by the Times as a patron of the alleged male prostitution service. The paper said Balach claimed that an escort he had hired later fraudulently used his credit cards.

In an interview before his resignation was announced, Balach said, "I have been a victim. I'm cooperating fully. I've talked several times with the Secret Service."

He declined to elaborate, but said the Times had published "an accurate account of the turmoil I've been through" the last few months.

The Times quoted unnamed witnesses and law enforcement agents as saying the Secret Service kept one box of seized files containing names and other information about high-level government officials who were clients of the male escort business.

Law enforcement officials familiar with the probe said investigators have obtained credit card receipts and phone logs linking additional political figures to the prostitution ring. The officials refused to be quoted by name or provide additional details.

Robert Snow, a spokesman for the Secret Service, said its agents are working for Stephens. He said the U.S. attorney will present the case to a grand jury.

The Times said Stanley Mark Tapscott, one of its former assistant managing editors, was among those who used escort services. Tapscott, who resigned June 20, said he had not paid for sexual services of any kind, but was conducting an investigation into dial-a-porn services. The paper said its editors were unaware of Tapscott's reporting assignment.

Another individual identified by the Times as a patron of the escort services was Charles K. Dutcher, former associate director of presidential personnel in the Reagan administration. Dutcher, now a private consultant, told the newspaper that "stress" drove him to seek out a male prostitute once.

Calls to Dutcher's home were not answered and he did not immediately return messages left on his answering machine.

LATEST NEWS THE WEST UTAH ▾ SPORTS ▾ OPINION MAGAZINE MORE ▾

POLITICAL FIGURES ARE LINKED TO A D.C. 'CALL-BOY' RING

By Deseret News | Jun 30, 1989, 2:00am EST

Federal prosecutors are investigating an alleged homosexual prostitution ring that catered to political figures including a Labor Department official, who resigned when the investigation was made public.

The investigation is based on financial records and other material seized in raids on a house in an up-scale Washington neighborhood that police say was used by escort services with names such as "Dream Boys" and "Man to Man." U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens on Thursday confirmed the investigation into allegedly fraudulent multiple billings of the services' patrons, after The Washington Times reported that the ring was patronized by Reagan and Bush administration officials, congressional aides and one of its own former editors.

One of a handful of individuals named in the Times article, Paul R. Balach, resigned Thursday evening.

"I hereby resign to the public disclosure of activities concerning my personal life," Balach said in a letter to Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole's political personnel liaison to the White House.

The Times quoted Balach as saying department Solicitor Robert Davis told him he had a choice of resigning or being fired. He said he was not allowed to talk to Dole about the matter.

"Somebody else is going to clean out my office. They didn't want me to come back," Balach said.

Balach told the Times that thousands of dollars in charges were run up on his credit cards without his knowledge after he used the service.

The Times said another of the ring's clients was so politically well-connected that he was able to arrange a middle-of-the night tour of the White House in July 1988 for a group including two male prostitutes.

Secret Service agents and District of Columbia police raided the escort service house in Northwest Washington on two occasions, in February and May.

Stephens refused to talk about allegations of the homosexual ring, but said that his office "has been investigating allegations involving credit card fraud arising from the execution of those warrants."

During the raids, officers confiscated multiline telephones, paging devices, credit card imprinters, numerous bank statements, credit card slips and a diary of the escort business, according to an inventory filed in U.S. District Court.

The Times said it has obtained a number of credit card slips and it identified individuals who paid for services, including Balach.

Labor Department sources said Balach decided Thursday to take a few days' leave after being named by the Times as a patron of the services. He resigned Thursday evening.

The Times quoted unnamed witnesses and law enforcement agents as saying the Secret Service kept one box of seized files containing names and other information about high-level government officials who were clients of the escort businesses.

The Times said Stanley Mark Tapscott, one of its former assistant managing editors, was among those who used the escort services.

NEWS

U.S. AIDE QUILTS AMID ESCORT SERVICE PROBE

By Chicago Tribune

Chicago Tribune • Jun 30, 1989 at 12:00 am

WASHINGTON — An investigation of the misuse of credit cards by a male escort service in Washington has attracted growing media attention after it was disclosed that a former White House personnel department aide and a political appointee to the Labor Department had engaged the firm's services.

The Labor Department official resigned Thursday night in the midst of the fraud investigation centering on alleged credit card duplicate billings.

The escort service operated out of a private house in a fashionable neighborhood in the city's northwest area from last October until February. Using several names, including Professional Services Inc., Dream Boys, Man to Man, and Ultimate Models, the service arranged for male escorts for fees ranging from $150 to $300. Often the fees were charged on credit cards.

On Feb. 28, the house was raided by city police and Secret Service agents, who seized records and, according to police, made one drug arrest. The presence of Secret Service agents was unusual because they normally are not involved in local police operations. It is illegal to provide escorts for the purpose of prostitution, but no formal charges have arisen since the raid.

A Secret Service spokesman said the service is investigating misuse of credit cards, and a spokesman at the U.S. attorney's office said the case will be presented to a grand jury.

According to the building's landlady, who asked anonymity, the tenants left and the rent was not paid. In early May, she arranged for U.S. marshals, who conduct evictions in the District of Columbia, to remove the possessions of the former tenants under landlord eviction regulations.

Apparently news reporters had obtained some of the credit card records of the organization at that time.

On Thursday, the Washington Times, the smaller of Washington's two dailies, reported that Charles K. Dutcher, former associate director of personnel in President Ronald Reagan's administration, and Paul R. Balach, who is Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole's political personnel liaison with the White House, were customers of the service.

Last year, both men were officials of the Office of Professional Management, the government's main personnel agency.

The paper quoted Balach as saying he was victim of a grand larceny by an escort who worked for the service who had allegedly blackmailed him.

On Thursday night, Balach resigned his post, citing "public disclosure of activities concerning my personal life."

The Washington Times said that Dutcher acknowledged that he had used the service once and that the encounter was for sexual purposes.

Most Read

Elizabeth restaurant to close after 10 years of whimsical dining

6:00 AM

GOVERNMENT / THE ELITE - LOOKING GLASS NEWS

View without photos
View with photos

White House 'call-boy' scandal Revisited: Wither Paul Rodriguez, Ace Reporter?

by Todd Brendan Fahey Friends of Liberty

Entered into the database on Saturday, April 30th, 2005 @ 21:05:23 MST

99.8% of the criticism with which the Washington Times and its sister magazine, Insight are skewered will be phrased as such: "Oh, they're just right-wing rags"; "They're Bush propagand organs"; "They're owned by Rev. Sun Myung-moon [of the Moon Unification Church...or, the Moonies], and he supports all the right-wing causes, so what did you expect?"

The twin publications are, indeed, financed by Sun Myung-moon, and they do both serve more or less the Bush (his poppy and the son) credo. As far as being "right-wing rags," I have no problem with that--nor would I have anything against anyone throwing vast piles of money at "right-wing rags," should the political bent truly stay right-wing. I don't believe that George Herbert Walker Bush or George W. Bush are conservative, and so the other point is moot; also, no, a newspaper or magazine should not serve as a mouthpiece for any President (of any ideology). Let the Republican National Committee or Democrat National Committee serve that function.

There was a time, though, a blip on the screen of time, that the Washington Times served the public interest in a big way. That day was June 29, 1989, when the Times's investigative reporter Paul Rodriguez and editor-in-chief Wes Pruden blindsided the Establishment with a front-page article that, for a few days, would cause all-over body-blister upon homosexual and paedophillic men in the upper echelon of Washington D.C. culture and politics. You remember.

SUNNY
 HIGH 74, LOW 63, WIND 10

The Washington Times
 THURSDAY, JUNE 29, 1989 • WASHINGTON, D.C. PHONE (202) 636-3000 25 cents
 SUBSCRIBER SERVICE (202) 636-3333

Homosexual prostitution inquiry ensnares VIPs with Reagan, Bush

'Call boys' took midnight tour of White House

By Paul M. Rodriguez
 and George Archibald
 of The Washington Times

A homosexual prostitution ring is under investigation by federal and District authorities and includes among its clients key officials of the Reagan and Bush administrations, military officers, congressional aides and U.S. and foreign businessmen with close social ties to Washington's political elite, documents obtained by The Washington Times reveal.

One of the ring's high-profile clients was so well connected, in fact, that he could arrange a middle-of-the-night tour of the White House for his friends on Sunday, July 3, of last year. Among the six persons on the extraordinary 1 a.m. tour were two male prostitutes.

Federal authorities, including the Secret Service, are investigating criminal aspects of the ring and have told male prostitutes and their homosexual clients that a grand jury will deliberate over the evidence throughout the summer, The Times learned.

Reporters for this newspaper examined hundreds of credit-card vouchers, drawn on both corporate and personal cards and made payable to the escort service operated by the homosexual ring. Many of the vouchers were run through a so-called "sub-merchant" account of the Chancellors Federal Home by a son of the owner, without the company's knowledge.

Among the client names contained in the vouchers -- and identified by prostitutes and escort operators -- are government officials, locally based U.S. military officers, businessmen, lawyers, bankers, congressional aides and other professionals.

Editors of The Times said the newspaper would print only the names of those found to be in sensitive government posts or positions of influence. "There is no intention of publishing names or facts about the operation merely for titillation,"

Wesley Pruden, managing editor of The Times.

The office of U.S. Attorney Jay B. Stephens, former deputy White House counsel to President Reagan, is coordinating federal aspects of the inquiry but refused to discuss the investigation or grand jury action.

Several former White House colleagues of Mr. Stephens are listed among clients of the homosexual prostitution ring, according to the credit-card records, and those persons have confirmed that the charges were theirs.

Mr. Stephens' office, after first saying it would cooperate with The Times' inquiry, withdrew the offer late yesterday and also declined to say whether Mr. Stephens would refuse himself from the case because of possible conflict of interest.

At least one highly placed Bush administration official and a wealthy businessman who procured homosexual prostitutes from the escort services operated by the ring are cooperating with the investigation, several sources said.

Among clients who charged homosexual prostitute services on major credit cards over the past 18 months are Charles K. Dutcher, former associate director of presidential personnel in the Reagan administration, and Paul R. Balach, Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dale's political personnel liaison to the White House.

In the 1970s, Mr. Dutcher was a congressional aide to former Rep. Robert Baucus, Maryland Republican who resigned from the House after he admitted having engaged in sexual liaisons with teen-age male

see FROBE, page A7

Or do you? And if not, how might it be that something this explosive just slipped past you? (Easy answer: After a hot-breaking story, Washington Times did a very lazy followup (albeit, most probably under weight of tremendous pressure), and none of the other D.C. newspapers--or any other major paper in the nation--ran it in the first place. The story was quashed, stomped-upon.)

In sum, and for reasons that will need to be answered by Paul Rodriguez and Wes Pruden, a homosexual call-boy ring had been operating in D.C. for some time, and through an investigation of credit card fraud and sundry other fiscal malfeasance, the FBI was called in to investigate. What it uncovered was too ugly and affected too many important men for to be allowed to gain any traction in the Media or the public eye. So, the story disappeared. Fortunately, in this Internet age, nothing disappears for long.

Questions for Paul Rodriguez:

1) In what manner were you first alerted to the homosexual call-boy ring? When you picked up the phone for the first time on this soon-to-be and short-lived story, who was on the other line? And after that first phone call, who else weighed in with information?

2) How did you convince editor Wesley Pruden to run the story at all, nevermind on the front page? These were prominent D.C. figures who were (or should have been) exposed; and George Bush's White House was involved in after-hours parading of youngish boys down the sacred office hallways. Wasn't Mr. Pruden concerned that the Times would suffer a bit of heat on this?

3) God bless Mr. Pruden for placing it square on the front page. But damn him for retreating from it in-toto. How was the decision made for to abandon the story, which the Times did do. Specifically, what persons (by name, please--it's a long list, so take your time...) convinced Mr. Pruden and yourself that it was neither in either of your best interests, nor in the interest of the Times, to go forward with further investigation or publication of the call-boy story?

3a) How did you, personally, feel--when the story was yanked from you? How do you feel today about having a star story pulled from your pen, told to cease and desist on something so rare and brave? It must hurt.

4) Mr. Pruden issued an inline disclaimer in the original Times publication, that the Times would not be releasing all names of persons involved in the homosexual call-boy ring; that it wasn't the Times' s intention "to titillate." OK. On one hand, that's an honorable thing to write. On the other hand, since local newspapers print regularly the police docketed names of persons arrested in their geographical region of Prostitution; Driving Under the Influence; Robbery/Burglary, Shoplifting, etc., why weren't We The People allowed to see every name of every scumbag who was either arrested in or linked definitively (by security cameras or with signatures on their credit cards, or in any other tangible way) to this debacle?

The public was deprived of knowing who amongst "our leaders" was involved in prostitution--which is still a crime, in every jurisdiction other than parts of Nevada.

5) Mr. Rodriguez, you had a whole lot of hard-data information from FBI and other police details, and from credit card companies and probably from security cameras--and, lucky for you: otherwise you'd be six-feet under by now. So, you stayed alive and ended up for a long while at the Times's sister magazine Insight. Where you never again touched the story in question. But since you've recently resigned from Insight, you're now a free man.

So: Who were involved? We already know about Charles K. Dutcher, former associate director of presidential personnel, Reagan administration; and of Paul R. Balach, then-Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole's political personnel liaison to the White House. They confessed. We know also about former Republican Congressman Robert Bauman (Maryland, 2 terms), who sought not to run for reelection after being caught bending the rheostat in bathhouses with The Boys; not so coincidentally, Mr. Charles Dutcher had been an aide to Congressman Bauman (I bet he had). [Note: Bob Bauman, who is also now in the private sector, should also step forward and tell all he knows about the call-boy ring; as an outed homosexual, he is also remained a stalwart small-government conservative over the past two decades. So, bravo, Mr. Bauman; now, please consider doing the right thing now.]

With the "Jeff Gannon" affair and his 14 night's stay in the White House (among 200 appearances there) blossoming; and what with Ken Mehlman, Republican National Committee Chairman, refusing to answer questions directly as to his sexual orientation or of his relationship, if any, to "Jeff Gannon"; and with eye-witnesses having spotted Karl Rove and White House Press Secretary Scott McClellan at gay bars and parties involving homosexual sex activities, this story is not going to go away. It's a New Era in communications; bloggers can't be made to shut up.

So far, most of the attention to the "Jeff Gannon" situation has come from the Left; notably, "conservative" publications don't want to touch it--for fear that it will somehow taint George W. Bush...as the events of June 29, 1989 would have tainted George H. W. Bush. The apple never falls far from the tree, as it were.

JOIN US

Join the National Alliance – Our Growing Real-World Intentional
White Community

NATIONAL VANGUARD

Toward a New Consciousness; a New Order; a New People.

ANDREW HAMILTON · ESSAYS

Sodom on the Potomac

KEVIN ALFRED STROM (EDITOR) · 31 JULY, 2018

0 11

Henry W. Vinson

Confessions of a D.C. Madam: The Politics of Sex, Lies, and Blackmail, by Henry W. Vinson with Nick Bryant (Walterville, Ore.: TrineDay, 2014) 205 pp.

reviewed by Andrew Hamilton

DURING THE Republican administrations of Ronald Reagan and George H.W. Bush, Henry W. Vinson ran the largest homosexual prostitution ring in the nation's capital. It catered to powerful politicians, government bureaucrats, businessmen, media figures, and military officers.

Dubbed the "D.C. Madam" by the press — not to be confused with Washington D.C. procuress Deborah Jeane Palfrey, who was later given the same name (a tale unto itself) — Vinson tells his story with the assistance of investigative reporter Nick Bryant.

It is apparent that sexual degeneracy is endemic in society's top political and media circles, Leftist and conservative. Homosexuality is rampant and many White members of the Jewish-dominated Establishment are participants in the lifestyle. Elite homosexuals frequently have wives and children.

Vinson, a mortician by trade, acquired his first homosexual "escort service" for $10,000 from a physically emaciated man named "Richard" who was at death's door thanks to AIDS. Because the business was called Ebony and Ivory it doubtless supplied Negro men to White homosexuals, though Vinson does not admit this.

At that time Vinson knew a man who made $1,000 to $2,000 a day "turning tricks" in the capital. Another twentysomething of his acquaintance — "tall and slender with flaxen, blond hair and blue eyes — he looked like a Swedish model" — on rare occasions made as much as $10,000 a day. Vinson calculated that he could quickly recoup his initial $10,000 investment.

Though Vinson and Bryant do not say so — they simply depict Henry as an exceptionally savvy entrepreneur — the operator of a criminal enterprise does not pay state or federal taxes, social security, job or health benefits, or adhere to workplace rules that severely burden legitimate businessmen.

The Establishment and authorities turn a blind eye to this because the widespread existence and spread of homosexuality destroys families and dissolves healthy social bonds, which they desire.

Extensive homosexuality, lesbianism, and other forms of non-procreative deviance are de facto forms of contraception.<sup>1</sup> In these cases contraception is the indirect result of population-level behavioral change inculcated by social norms, ideas, and beliefs rather than the direct consequence of devices or chemical or surgical alterations of large numbers of people.

Vinson ran his business for three years, from ages 26 to 29 (roughly 1987 to 1989).

On pages 73-75 Vinson describes how he quickly expanded the scope of his enterprise, using over 40 different phone lines. One technique was to pay the overdue phone bills of defunct homosexual escort services still listed in the yellow pages in exchange for ownership of the business names and telephone numbers.

This took place while he was still working as a mortician for a large, respectable family-owned D.C. funeral chain. Unbeknownst to his employers Vinson installed a phone in a showroom casket to field prostitution requests — illustrative of his sleazy morality. How would you like to pay thousands of dollars to entrust a deceased family member to the care of such a creature?

Vinson and one of the owner's sons, a fellow homosexual, concocted a fraudulent credit card scheme that used the family business as a cover.

Many customers, most of whom were high status and well to do, paid for sex not with cash but with corporate and government-issued credit cards. (In other words, consumers and taxpayers — you and I — footed their bills.) Vinson and his friend falsified the transactions so they would look like payments for funeral supplies.

The son was later forced out of the firm when his father discovered what he was doing.

This man is one of two homosexual morticians Vinson mentions. The other was from the same small town in West Virginia he was (the two shared “a passion for death care”). In a weird example of inversion Vinson describes him as maintaining a “secret life” with a wife and children rather than the other way around.

The idea of homosexuals in the funeral business — enamored of it even — is a bit disconcerting. Vinson had always been strongly attracted to “death care.” His boyhood dream was to be an undertaker. Later he “delighted in every facet” of mortuary school. The classes — “anatomy, physiology, restorative art, etc.” — were “captivating, even exhilarating.”

A mysterious, sinister, and powerful D.C. homosexual pedophile named Craig Spence, who Vinson calls “The Prince of Darkness,” plays a major part in the story. He had ties to the Deep State, particularly the CIA and U.S. Secret Service.

Spence was the man who arranged midnight tours of Reagan’s White House for homosexuals, including prostitutes, facilitated by his Secret Service cronies. (“Homosexual prostitution inquiry ensnares VIPs with Reagan, Bush: ‘Call Boys’ took midnight tour of White House,” Washington Times, June 29, 1989) [Enlarged JPGs of original article: p. A1, p. A7]

Off-duty Secret Service personnel also served as Spence’s private bodyguards.

In 1982 Spence was positively profiled by the New York Times, which described him as “extremely conservative in his political views and secretive about his work.” He was portrayed as a Washington D.C. powerbroker akin to the recent D.C. Comet Pizza proprietor about whom reporting and criticism have been squelched. “There seems to be an inexhaustible demand in Washington for the sort of thing Mr. Spence offers” the Times coyly informed its clued-in readers. (“Have Names, Will Open Right Doors,” New York Times, January 18, 1982, p. A14.)

Two years earlier the Washington Post had gushed: “Not since Ethel Kennedy used to give her famous Hickory Hill seminars for great minds of our times during the days of Camelot has anyone staged seminars successfully on a continuing social basis in Washington. That’s what Craig Spence has been doing.”

Spence paid Vinson $20,000 a month for prostitutes (annualized: $240,000 a year). These were for use in his blackmail operations as well as for himself.

It was at Spence’s D.C. home that Vinson met homosexual Negro Republican Lawrence E. “Larry” King, head of Omaha, Nebraska’s

Lawrence E. King, Jr.

---

Franklin Community Federal Credit Union and a prominent figure in the Reagan-Bush Republican Party.

Vinson claims that although Larry King, Craig Spence, and others pressed him to procure underage boys, he refused. Principled Henry would never have sex with or traffic in underage boys. (The Feds did not allege that he did — but they actively cover up child sex trafficking.)

During a meeting with Spence and King, both of whom were high on cocaine, King revealed that he and Spence operated an interstate pedophile network that flew children coast-to-coast. King also discussed that he and Spence had a clientele of powerful pedophiles who actually took pleasure in murdering children. In fact, King seemed to be obsessed with the subject of murdering children. (p. 85)

In subsequent meetings

they attempted to coerce me into ensnaring children for them. King had previously mentioned that he flew children into D.C., and the escorts I employed confirmed that minors were in attendance at Spence’s orgies. . . . I had come to the horrifying conclusion that Spence and King operated an interstate pedophile network for their powerbroker cronies. But I absolutely refused to aid and abet their abuse of children, despite Spence’s potential to blackmail me or perhaps even kill me. . . . [T]heir demands escalated into an inexorable crescendo: Spence and King finally demanded that I pluck destitute children off the streets of D.C. and deliver the children to them. (p. 99)

Behind a secret panel fronted by a two-way mirror in Spence's living room was a hidden room filled with state-of-the-art audio and video surveillance equipment. The house was wired to record conversations and film orgies and people having sex. Spence told Vinson that CIA operatives had installed the system. (pp. 85-86) (More: "Power broker served drugs, sex at parties bugged for blackmail," Washington Times, June 30, 1989, p. A1)

Vinson describes an "unbridled" homosexual/heterosexual orgy he witnessed at this upscale D.C. residence involving thirty people: "Magnums of Dom Pérignon and china bowls brimming with cocaine" were scattered about the living room. The majority of participants appeared to be armed services personnel because military uniforms littered the floor and furniture. "A three-star general who was fully clothed sat next to Spence on the sofa. He was heavysset and around six feet tall. He had gray hair and distinguished facial features, and he nonchalantly conversed with Spence."

Vinson's criminal enterprise started to unravel after the federal government's General Accounting Office asked why Donald Gregg was charging so much money for funeral accessories on his government-issued MasterCard. At the time Gregg, a 31-year veteran of the CIA, was Vice President George H.W. Bush's national security advisor. President Bush later made Gregg U.S. Ambassador to South Korea.

Gregg had a wife and daughter. His daughter married Christopher Buckley, son of conservative godfather William F. Buckley, Jr., also a former CIA agent.

Today Gregg is 90 years old.

Vinson says he was summoned to a meeting at Craig Spence's condominium where a Bush cabinet member whose name the author withholds threatened him if he did not write a false letter to the GAO about the credit card charges to conceal Gregg's homosexual activities from investigators. The cabinet official sported a miniature U.S. flag pin on his lapel.

The Bush cabinet official — another family man — was friends with Spence, who “once provided him with adolescent boys.” (p. 107) Vinson speculates the official must have belonged to the “same shadowy network” as Spence, or been compromised by it.

Spence, now emaciated, had undergone shocking physical deterioration, having contracted AIDS and developed an addiction to crack cocaine. This was the last time Vinson saw Spence, who died a strange death at age 48 in Boston's most expensive hotel, the elegant Ritz Carlton, well described by Michael Hedges and Jerry Seper: “In Death, Spence stayed true to form” (Washington Times, November 13, 1989). Spence's death was later ruled a suicide.

In case you're wondering, Vinson never screened his prostitutes for HIV. Customers, of course, weren't screened either.

This became an issue at his sentencing, when he received 63 months (a little over five years) in federal prison. The U.S. District Court judge was German-born Jew Harold Greene, who had adjudicated the breakup of AT&T.

Greene and his parents had “fled” Nazi Germany . . . in 1943!

Two of the three federal judges who ruled against Vinson on appeal were Democrat Jews Abner Mikva and now U.S. Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg.

Vinson badmouths his criminal defense attorney, Wisconsin-born Greta van Susteren, who later became a TV presenter, though he fails to clearly state what she did wrong. After all, he was a criminal. An attorney he hired in a subsequent case gave him much the same advice Van Susteren had. Vinson resents the fact that her father, who was of Dutch descent, had been a close ally of Joseph McCarthy's in the 1950s. (Van Susteren's mother was Irish.) He does not inform readers that Urban Van Susteren disavowed the Senator as the Left's attacks against the embattled anti-Communist lawmaker grew more and more frenzied.

One wonders about the utility of sexual blackmail in a degenerate society. Sex and sexual perversion permeate the social order. Initially the fish rots from the head down, but eventually everybody is sexually corrupt. Feigned "outrage" when a specific instance is selectively publicized and prosecuted is obviously phony.

The elite mob bays for blood and screams for somebody's head on a pike. The frenzied demand for ritual public humiliation and destruction is boundless. This primitive instinct seems endemic to decaying, closed societies.

Everything depends on who is targeted, investigated, exposed and held up for condemnation and ridicule and who isn't, who is socially destroyed and who is not, and what spin the media and other opinion makers put on the story. Glaring double standards, which are the norm, do not trouble anybody, so the strange farce goes on and on.

The usual pattern is for conservatives and right-wingers to suffer while Leftists receive a free pass (John and Edward Kennedy, Bill Clinton). Pervert Gerry Studds (D.-Mass.) (a descendant of Elbridge Gerry, the fifth Vice President of the United States) not only retained his congressional seat but received a standing ovation from his wealthy Cape Cod constituents. At precisely the same time the far more normal Daniel Crane (R.-Ill.) was hounded from office and cried on camera as he publicly confessed his sin. (Jimmy Swaggart did the same thing.)

If you shift your point of view to the potential victim — the person threatened with exposure — the utility of the practice becomes clearer. Fear and horror make most people pliable. Sexually corrupt ab initio, they now sink deeper into the ruling class's morass of sin and evil.

The Issue of Credibility

Is Henry Vinson credible?

The co-author of D.C. Madam is independent investigative journalist Nick Bryant, who wrote The Franklin Scandal, which I have also read. The Franklin Scandal is about an alleged nationwide pedophile and child trafficking ring based in Omaha, Nebraska in the 1980s. Vinson's story intersects with Franklin because it includes some of the same D.C. figures involved in that ring.

Bryant was unable to obtain a "mainstream" publisher for either book, so both were issued by a small press in Oregon called TrineDay, which specializes in "conspiracy" literature. Some of its titles do not inspire trust. Publishers Weekly printed a useful profile of the little firm in 2012. ("Discover a Publisher: TrineDay")

Nevertheless, my sense is that Nick Bryant is a reliable reporter. The facts he has marshalled, together with those brought to light by the late attorney John W. DeCamp ("Controversial former senator John DeCamp dies," Lincoln Journal Star, Aug. 1, 2017), author of The Franklin Cover-Up: Child Abuse, Satanism, and Murder in Nebraska, and the late, impressive reporter Paul Rodriguez ("Paul M. Rodriguez, former Times investigative reporter, dies at 61," Washington Times, Oct. 8, 2013) and other Washington Times journalists, create a rebuttable presumption that what these investigators reported is substantially true.

Moreover, the actions of federal, state, and local authorities and the mass media to suppress the truth and harm victims and investigators resemble those used to suppress racial, historical, anti-Communist, and right-wing speech generally despite the fact that the victims and writers in the sex cases are not right-wing.

Finally, the prevailing "values" and culture of Establishment-glorified, -fostered and lavishly-funded sexual degeneracy is consistent with the activities described in D.C. Madam and The Franklin Scandal.

Yet Henry Vinson is an unsavory character. Everything he says should not be accepted uncritically.

He adopts a number of dubious personas — Innocent Henry, Naïve Henry, Fall Guy Henry.

Innocent Henry is never responsible for anything. Long before he became a notorious sex entrepreneur, funeral competitors motivated (he says) by professional jealousy and working in cahoots with the West Virginia state licensing board and local West Virginia media made up lies about his mortuary business, driving him from the state.

He has also had convoluted legal dustups with the federal government since his run-in with the Deep State (see Chapter 16, “Back to the Big House”).

Vinson contracted Hepatitis A and B. How? From promiscuous sex, as one might reasonably assume based upon probabilities? No. In 1986, he says, he was embalming an “elderly emaciated man” who had been autopsied. Medical personnel had left a needle in the cadaver which sliced Vinson’s forearm. As he withdrew his arm the open wound brushed against the corpse’s ribcage. Days later the death certificate arrived. It stated the old man had Hepatitis A and B and died from AIDS. A blood test confirmed that Innocent Henry contracted Hepatitis A and B from the cadaver but avoided AIDS.

Naïve (but always prosperous!) Henry created and ran the largest homosexual criminal enterprise in the nation’s capital, catering to high level politicians and bureaucrats and directly linked to a CIA and Secret Service homosexual and pedophile blackmail ring. Yet Vinson stumbled into this quagmire by accident.

He told a gullible gay-friendly female journalist when his book came out, “I didn’t know what an escort was when I went to DC. I truly thought that [escorts] just took people around the city.”

All he wanted was to make money and have innocent (homosexual) fun doing so. But bad guys Craig Spence and his right-hand man “Tony” (the only designation he is given in the text and index), the operator of another

Washington D.C. homosexual prostitution ring, led him like a lamb to slaughter.

1989 New York Times article about Craig J. Spence. Though the article doesn't tell readers, the incident involved a homosexual quarrel.

---

“My escort service had started out as a blithe, carefree adventure, but it had morphed beyond my control. I had created a Frankenstein, and I was impotent to guide its course. I was a victim of my own success.”

“Tony,” a mysterious, swarthy, blue-eyed Italian invariably flanked by two tall, “stunningly handsome, muscle-laden,” blond, blue-eyed gun-toting ex-Special Forces “brutes,” “was most likely gay,” but “hard-boiled gay.” “Indeed, he came across as the most hardboiled gay man I ever met.” Tony spoke of having carried out contract hits.

The trio first showed up at Vinson's door on roaring motorcycles, Tony cradling “a black motorcycle helmet in his left arm” and wearing “a black leather jacket and black leather chaps.”

Reading lurid passages such as these makes the reader wonder whether this part of the story is true or constitutes homosexual fiction.

Unlike other characters who are unquestionably real, the much discussed Tony was “a phantom.” “I made inquiries about his identity, but I never managed to learn even his last name.” “Unlike Spence, he said very little [about himself, his background, or activities] that was definitive.”

Finally, Tony disappears altogether. “Tony then suddenly vanished from my life just as suddenly as he had appeared. His various phone numbers were disconnected, and I never heard from him again.”

Tony was apparently a government spook. Vinson used him to obtain background information about anonymous clients he was curious about.

“Tony would run a complete background check, providing me with the individual’s home address, place of employment, income, etc.”

For example, I had a client named Vernon Houk, who periodically holed up in a D.C. hotel and ordered up to five escorts a day, and he was also into unprotected sex. Tony told me that Houk was the director of the Center for Environmental Health at the Centers for Disease Control.

Houk was also Assistant Surgeon General of the United States under Presidents Reagan and Bush I. “Although Houk lived in Atlanta, where the Centers for Disease Control is headquartered, he was fond of holing up in D.C. hotels with multiple bottles of booze and several escorts over the course of a weekend for bacchanal laced sprees.”

Some Elite Perverts

Other VIPs who patronized Vinson’s service included Paul R. Balach, Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole’s (R.) personnel liaison with the Bush White House. Balach became enamored of a prostitute named Michael Manos, upon whom he lavished money and gifts, including an automobile. Manos stole Balach’s check book and forged checks in his name.

Charles K. Dutcher, associate director of presidential personnel in the Reagan Administration, was a former aide to conservative U.S. Rep. Robert Bauman (R.-Md.), who resigned from Congress after it was revealed he engaged in sex with teenage males.

A Hollywood denizen, Reagan seems to have had an affinity for homosexuals. Vinson’s book corroborates the Washington Times’ 1989 report of midnight tours of the Reagan White House.

A homosexual ring had also been associated with Reagan’s California gubernatorial regime.

And Reagan’s daughter Patti Davis said that after a scene or photograph of two men kissing that she saw as a little girl, her father, upon inquiry, assured her that it was perfectly natural.

The doorkeeper of the U.S. House of Representatives, Democrat Richard Rausch, a heavy drinker and chain smoker, engaged Vinson's prostitutes and became a personal friend. After the Secret Service raided Vinson's prostitution business Rausch sheltered him in his apartment.

Democratic Party bigwig Alan Baron, a Jew, was "a prolific client of my escort service." (Vinson, a Leftist, never identifies Baron or anybody else as Jewish.) Vinson had sex with Baron, a cocaine user, for money. Later they became friends.

In addition to holding high posts in the presidential campaigns of Democrats Harold Hughes, Edmund Muskie, and George McGovern, Baron wrote political columns for the Wall Street Journal and was a frequent guest on PBS TV's MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour. In 1972 he was executive director of the Democratic National Committee.

Another Jewish client Vinson had sex with was notorious Congressman Barney Frank (D.-Mass.). Frank's telephone request for a prostitute "essentially sounded like he desired an underage boy." A "seasoned veteran of escort etiquette," Frank had $200 in cash laid out on his end table when Vinson arrived. "After I scooped up the money, he then started to hug and kiss me. Congressman Frank was extremely out of shape, and he had a very hairy body." Vinson didn't enjoy the experience.

Conservative Congressman and Senator Larry Craig (R.-Id.) (married but with no biological children of his own) was another "frequent flyer of my escort service. Craig preferred males who were quite masculine with a plethora of body hair — bear types." In 2007 Craig, who had "a compulsive appetite for homosexual sex," was arrested at the Minneapolis-St. Paul Airport trying to pick up an undercover policeman in a restroom stall.

Vinson is indignant that Craig voted against homosexual marriage and expanding "hate crime" laws to include homosexuals as a legally privileged class along with Jews, Blacks, and other non-Whites. The Human Rights Campaign, America's largest homosexual lobby, awarded Craig a zero percent rating when it came to their demands.

Washington Times investigative reporters discovered — and reported — that their own assistant managing editor Stanley Mark Tapscott was a Vinson customer. Previously he had worked in Reagan's Office of Personnel Management.

Homosexuals seem to be prominent in personnel jobs — deciding who gets hired, who receives desirable positions, and who exercises power. Tapscott tendered his resignation and it was accepted.

Not mentioned in the book, but in the Washington Times' reports, is Todd A. Blodgett, who prepared President Reagan's daily news summaries. He later sat on the Bush/Quayle election committee and served on the staff of the Republican National Committee.

Wikipedia summarizes Blodgett's subsequent role infiltrating pro-White groups as a full-time paid informant for the FBI. He co-owned Resistance Records, the largest pro-White record label, and interfaced with the anti-White Joint Terrorism Task Force (JTTF) and the Jewish hate and anti-free speech group the Southern Poverty Law Center, part of the Deep State.

Blodgett told Times reporters in 1989 that a charge for homosexual sex on his credit card was made by his buddy, a homosexual Boston antiques dealer, not by Blodgett.

Doctors, lawyers, and business executives and U.S. and allied military officials were also Vinson's clients.

Due to the power of the American Deep State, Ronald Reagan's CIA Director William J. Casey should also be mentioned. Married and the father of one daughter, he was a personal friend of Craig Spence and attended his "soirées" while in office. He also hired Vinson's prostitutes.

William Casey started calling me for gay escorts in 1986. Like Barney Frank, his preferred escort was an eighteen-year-old with minimal body hair and a slender swimmer's physique. Although he requested that I provide him with underage escorts, I told him I wouldn't acquiesce. Casey met with the escorts at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel. After he was nude and splayed on a bed, he had the escorts rub oil over his body as he kissed and fondled them. Casey was old and withered, and the escorts didn't particularly savor their encounters with him. He wasn't able to have an erection. (p. 119)

Vinson says former Nixon Attorney General John Mitchell was also Spence's friend and attended his soirées.

The mass media, particularly the Washington Post, colluded with the government to conceal the scandal. Other lying news outlets included the New York Times and Los Angeles Times.

The single exception was Sun Myung Moon's Washington Times, which did genuine investigative reporting that remains a model of honest journalism to this day. The Washington Post attacked the Times' reports in an effort to belittle and discredit them in the eyes of its elite audience.

Vinson writes, "A number of media superstars used my escort service, and it's within the realm of reason that they too became victims of blackmail." Besides audio and video recordings of orgies and trysts, the government's shadow network tapped Vinson's phones and recorded his financial transactions.

I believe that a patron who merely phoned me had the potential to become a blackmail target. The media pundits who used my escort service are alive and thriving, and since the Secret Service absconded with the documentation that demonstrates they procured escorts from me, I can't name them without threat of a lawsuit.

Henry Vinson, Homosexual

A large portion of the book consists of Vinson's autobiography, unrelated to the political scandal.

Vinson is a product of contemporary Left-wing culture. His homosexuality, criminality and corruption, lifelong financial success (he has always made lots of money), and ideological views are conventional. He dislikes (White) “racists” and anybody opposed to homosexual privilege. As of 2015 he had had a “tall African-American” lover for 20 years.

His Twitter account, which has 74,000 followers, virtually none due to his little-known book, reveals a politically predictable Trump- and Putin-hating, James Comey-loving individual.

Fairly often Vinson employs odd locutions (“At the time Spence dropped his name and perverse predications, I thought his disclosure broached incomprehensible, and I was fairly skeptical of it”), or uses an incorrect word in place of a correct one (“I should be weary of ever crossing him.”)

Another idiosyncrasy: he invariably observes and remembers people’s appearance in great detail, including the details of what they wear, particularly women of any age.

Two black and white childhood photographs of Vinson, one taken at age 5, the other at 10, show a strikingly good-looking blond, blue-eyed boy.

Henry W.
Vinson, age 5

---

Yet he reports having felt out of place and isolated from his earliest days. Of course, he only found out in his 20s that his disagreeable father was not his biological dad, who turned out to be the blond Superintendent of Schools.

At age 13 an “obese, balding” acquaintance in his 30s made an overt, crude homosexual advance toward him. Vinson’s reaction was normal. It upset rather than excited him. Yet at 15 he says he “realized” he was a homosexual. He does not elaborate, so what he means by this remains unclear.

He says he was picked on, especially in high school. He hated Phy Ed class and showering with other boys so much that his mother got him excused. But the impression he conveys is one of overwhelming dread rather than erotic attraction. He claims he was called “faggot” and “queer” and routinely bullied.

This is the sort of “bullying” Jews and government (two real bullies) are obsessed with erasing among White boys, knowing full well it is natural and necessary to keep homosexuality in check.

The two most popular girls in high school, both of whom were “extremely beautiful,” one with “a perfect body,” befriended Vinson and became his protectors. “Peggy and Joyce were extremely assertive, and [normal] guys acquiesced to their wishes like trained poodles.”

The role of desirable White girls and women in protecting homosexuals, or in times past perhaps simply mitigating the roughness of their treatment, is extremely curious, as is the passive obedience of normal males to their demands in this regard.

What is clear is that Vinson’s full-fledged transformation required a) big cities and b) open, unpoliced, unpenalized homosexuality. He found this in Cincinnati, Ohio when he attended mortuary school, first in a public park frequented by homosexuals, then at large gay bars.

At 21, “I quickly came to the visceral realization that I wasn’t the only gay man in the world, and I was momentarily overwhelmed with jubilation. I finally had an existential affirmation of my homosexuality.” “I loved awakening my libido from its prolonged hibernation.” Haunting Cincinnati’s numerous gay bars, some of which hosted as many as 500 homosexuals a night, “I was floating in paradise.”

It is disturbing that industrial scale degeneracy of this kind was ubiquitous by 1981. Like Henry Vinson, the vast majority ensnared in this web were doubtless White. I wonder as well if they weren’t predominantly or at least disproportionately Nordic.

The nation’s capital was significantly more degenerate even than Cincinnati. “The gay bars had hundreds and hundreds of patrons,” homosexuals appeared together in public and had lucrative careers. This encouraged Vinson to cast off the last vestiges of subterfuge and restraint.

Clearly, social acceptance — which requires public and official “affirmation” combined with harsh repression of heterosexual resistance — is necessary to foster the levels of degeneracy we have today.

Vinson makes a psychologically curious statement about his “escort service.”

I have to confess that I found my escort service to be intoxicating. People of unsurpassed beauty surrounded me, and they made me feel like the most important person in their life since I was integral to their livelihood. My sexuality had been a nightmare for me in my earlier years, and now, finally, I had scores of people affirming my sexuality. It marked the first time in my life that I felt unconditionally accepted for simply being me. I had moved light years beyond being a social pariah.

He is talking about having ready sexual access to an endless variety of young men. He thinks he is “unconditionally accepted for simply being me” when he has just stated that the “beautiful” men showering him with attention did so because he was integral to their livelihood.

Conclusion

What are we to make of this decadent tale?

Can ruling class depravity be exploited to our benefit? Jews and the Establishment selectively invoke sexuality to marginalize or destroy those they hate. In theory good guys could do the same thing to them. From a behavioral standpoint they are completely vulnerable.

Unfortunately the bad guys control the Narrative. No matter how incongruous or extreme the double standard there will be no penalties for them as long as evil people retain a lock on the means of communication. Exposing the behavior of hypocrites and wrongdoers is meaningless if the media and authorities refuse to behave as they do toward good guys.

One might expect the System to succumb to “internal contradictions” as the Communists used to say. Can a society as degenerate as this one continue on indefinitely? Or will dominant perverts push things so far, become so debauched, that the System somehow collapses or tears itself apart?

Though such a scenario seems intuitively plausible, there is little objective evidence that such an outcome is occurring or will occur in the future.

---

Note

<sup>1</sup> “Contraception: the prevention of conception or impregnation.” “Contraceptive: 1. diminishing the likelihood of, or preventing, conception. 2. An agent that diminishes the likelihood of or prevents conception.” Dorland's Illustrated Medical Dictionary, 30th ed. (2003).

* * *

Source: Author